Market Review

Philippine government bonds posted negative returns in September as 10-year yields moved 42 bps higher amid renewed inflation concerns and expectations of further monetary tightening.

The local yield curve bear-steepened during the month, with selling pressure more pronounced in intermediate- and long-dated securities as investors demanded higher compensation for inflation and policy risks.

Inflation remained elevated, with August CPI at 6.1% year-on-year, while the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas projected September inflation to accelerate to 6.4%-7.4% due to higher food and fuel prices as well as peso weakness.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas maintained a hawkish tone following the August rate hike, which brought the policy rate to 5.00%. Market expectations shifted toward the possibility of additional tightening should inflation risks persist.
