Market Review

- Global fixed income declined in December by -2.08%. The yield on the 10Y U.S. Treasury bond jumped during the month from 4.17% to 4.57% following hawkish comments from the U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed).
- U.S. inflation (CPI) continued to rise in November to 2.7% y/y, marking the second consecutive increase from the September-low of 2.4% y/y. Month-on-month inflation told a more concerning story, as inflation crept up by +0.3% m/m, the highest jump since April. Meanwhile, core inflation, which excludes the more volatile prices of food and energy, remained at 3.3% y/y.
- Despite sticky inflation, the Fed pushed through with its communicated December rate cut of 25 bps, bringing its total policy rate reduction to 100 bps in 2024. However, the Fed indicated that it is likely to slow its pace of rate cuts next year with inflation remaining sticky which led markets to sell off.
- If U.S. economic data remains healthy and inflation does not have a significant uptick, this should allow the Fed to continue its rate cutting cycle in 2025. This would be supportive not only of U.S. markets, but global markets as well. Newly elected U.S. President Trump's policies will be a key factor to watch in the coming months too as these are likely to have a ripple effect that extends beyond the U.S.
