Market Review

- The Philippine Stock Exchange Index (PSEI) saw a decline in May as the lack of a resolution to the Iran conflict caused persistent risk-off sentiment. The PSEI lost 1.1% for the month, with May 29 marking the month-low of 5,768.76.
- In fixed income, Peso government bond yields surged with 2-5Y yields higher by as much as 60-100 basis points while 7Y-25Y yields were higher by 40-60bp.
- Inflation was the primary market driver. April CPI came in at 7.2% year-on-year, the fastest pace in three years and ahead of consensus estimates.
- The 1Q26 earnings season delivered limited positive catalysts, with mixed bank results and persistent weakness in property. Across sectors, corporates continue to flag margin pressures as elevated input costs constrain earnings growth.
- Poor market liquidity exacerbated market swings as liquidity providers were reluctant to take risk amid a volatile macro environment.
- US-Iran developments remained the key macro driver. The ceasefire stayed fragile even as Washington and Tehran moved toward talks on extending the truce, and reopening the Strait of Hormuz.
- For Peso equities, we expect range-bound trading near term at or below the 6,000 level, staying cautious and favoring defensives. Easing geopolitical risks or better domestic conditions could improve sentiment and create tactical opportunities in Philippine equities.
- For fixed income, the market is expected to remain volatile as developments in the war between the U.S. and Iran is driving expectations on oil prices and inflation.
