Market Review

- The Philippine Stock Exchange Index (PSEI) gained 3.29% in July, extending the rebound seen in June and closing the month at approximately 6,288. Positive market sentiment was supported by easing inflation concerns and improving expectations for domestic growth.
- Investor sentiment improved as inflation pressure continued to moderate. Headline inflation eased from 6.8% in May to 6.4% in June, while subsequent data showed a further slowdown, supporting expectations that inflation may be nearing its peak.
- The market remained focused on BSP policy expectations after the central bank raised its policy rate to 4.75% in June and maintained a cautious stance against inflation risks. While additional hikes remain possible, softer inflation data helped temper concerns over aggressive monetary tightening.
- Foreign participation showed signs of stabilization, with buying interest concentrated in large-cap names such as ICTSI, BPI, and BDO, helping support index performance despite lingering geopolitical and domestic political uncertainties.
- Corporate earnings expectations improved modestly amid expectations of a second-half recovery in economic activity. Investors continued to favor financials, consumer-related names, and selected conglomerates that stand to benefit from easing inflation and improved domestic demand.
- Markets will remain focused on the trajectory of inflation, BSP policy decisions, foreign fund flows, and the sustainability of the recovery in corporate earnings. Lower inflation and improving risk sentiment could continue to support Philippine equities, although geopolitical and domestic political developments remain key risks.
