How has the Fund performed?

Market Review

Global technology equities outperformed broader markets during August, with the Nasdaq 100 gaining 4.24%, supported by strong AI-related earnings and continued demand for semiconductor and infrastructure investments.

Nvidia delivered strong earnings and forward guidance, reinforcing confidence in the durability of AI spending and driving renewed investor interest across the semiconductor value chain.

AI-related capital expenditure remained a major market theme, benefiting semiconductor manufacturers, memory producers, networking companies, and technology infrastructure providers.

Investors will remain focused on AI-related earnings momentum, semiconductor demand trends, and the impact of higher interest rates on technology valuations, while monitoring potential volatility from geopolitical and macroeconomic developments.
