Market Review

Global equities posted slight losses in September as MSCI ACWI sank 1.50%. The S&P 500 lost 0.53% while the Nasdaq-100 advanced 3.08%. U.S. equities outperformed as investor confidence in the AI theme strengthened following solid earnings and continued evidence of resilient AI-related capital spending. Large-cap technology stocks drove most of the gains, helping the Nasdaq-100 significantly outperform broader markets.

Federal Reserve policy remained a key focus. Rising expectations of higher-for-longer interest rates and elevated U.S. Treasury yields increased valuation pressure on rate-sensitive sectors and smaller companies, resulting in narrower market leadership.
